FOREWORD

This document is designed to be an aid for players and referees alike. Naming is important in any culture, and even in our fantasy we like consistency; how many times while adventuring have you encountered an NPC with your character's first name or last name?

I don't know if it is possible to cover every name from every language, but with a broad base of names it is possible to create a fairly convincing simulation of it. In the French Name Tables, I have more than 2100 female names, more than 2100 male names, more than 4400 surnames (not including an excess of 800 place names) and more than 800 nicknames for each gender. Player Characters need never roll on these tables, although they might want to look at or roll on them at their discretion. PCs need never accept a name or nickname just because the dice rolled it.

Some nicknames are not positive and are used to imitate nicknames in society. Use at your own discretion and disregard any you find offensive.

I recommend generating a dozen or so names of each gender before play begins and keep that list on hand for any occasion. Appendix B, the Open Game Content has a ready made list to get you up and going.

French names are ideal for Gaulienne, Vermandois and Garont on Terra Ferax.

DICE ROLLING

In this document, d00 indicates using percentile dice (a pair of ten-sided dice) rolled to produce a number from 1-100. One die is designated as the "tens spot", while the other is the "ones spot"; a pair of 0s (00) indicates a 100 was rolled.

No dice? No Problem! There are many Java-based die rollers (Java works with Sun-OS, Linux, Mac, Pc, etc.) on the web; the one at Irony games is excellent: <http://irony.com/igroll.html>

INSTRUCTIONS

Decide on the gender of the person you're generating a name for. Roll (or choose) from the name configuration table. If a Middle name is indicated, roll (or choose) an additional time from the First name tables.

NOTES ON NAMES

These names are a collection of Celtic, French, Teutonic, Basque, and a few mythological names from the area of Gaul. Some names you may not like (Whynot as a surname? Well, it is a genuine surname.) With as many names as are available in these tables, just thumb down to the next acceptable name if you have a problem with any of them.

SURNAMES

Most surnames are patronymic (they come from the father); some are nicknames ('Bigge' indicating a large person), some were occupational (e.g. Smith) and some are locative ('of Sudbury').

Locative placenames are extremely rare and generally indicate a person who is not from the local area. In French a de indicates of. As with the English of, a de remains lower case. For those linguistically inclined, a de before a vowel is truncated to a d with an apostrophe (e.g. d'Angers; a quirk includes some references in England to d'Yorke meaning from York). Other combinations: de + la remains de la, but de + le becomes du, while de + les becomes des.

For random determination, there is only a 5% chance (1-5 on percentile dice) of having a placename surname (see the next table), otherwise roll (or select) below on the French Surnames table (page 84).

PLACES AS SURNAMES

In the Terra Ferax campaign, each map guide has a "Where Do I Come From" section, which will allow you to localize to that specific campaign map. The table below assumes you are using France as a background.

The following list provides some current places, many of which were in existence in the Middle Ages (Paris, Marseille, Citeaux, Clairvaux, Cluny, etc.). However, verifying that each and every one of these places was indeed in existence in the Middle Ages is beyond the scope this work.

Not all European French speakers are isolated in France. Some live in Switzerland and some in Belgium (including the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg). The two sets of dice tables are so that you regionalize (only France or Belgium or Switzerland) or generalize (any of the locations). And yes, these are modern divisions, not medieval ones (it depends when in the Middle Ages your campaign takes place as to which city is in which country).
