|----|--|----|--|
| 1 | A pair of matching silver rings . Each band has a goat's head and a tapering band wrapped in gold wire, the whole forming an Ouroboros-like loop. The pair is worth 500 GP. | 11 | An over-sized ear-cuff of worked silver, an octopus whose tentacles encircle the wearer's entire ear. The style of this piece is grotesque, which may affect its 300 GP value. |
| 2 | A fine steel brooch , depicting an ornate seal or crest, in a gold setting . The steel face is actually the key to a secret vault within a ruined tower, found by adventurers and sold for a pittance to a local jeweler , who reworked it into its current form. 300 GP | 12 | A thick gold chain strung with nine ancient silver coins , each mounted in a gold setting. One coin is a fake . One depicts a long-lost artifact, and provides a clue to its location . The piece is worth 250 GP, but the coins themselves might be worth more to a collector. |
| 3 | A bronze bracelet shaped like a coiled cobra. The snake's eyes are set with amethysts, and its body is wound with gold thread. 200 GP | 13 | A strand of interleaved copper discs and white coral beads . A pendant of red coral hangs from the center of the strand. 100 GP |
| 4 | A six-inch wide leather bracer decorated with intricate beadwork sewn with silver thread. The piece has cultural significance to a specific ethnic group , perhaps giving it greater value. 250 GP | 14 | A tortoise-shell mask that covers the upper-half of the face. The mask depicts a female face surrounded by flowing hair and is surmounted by a silver circlet studded with cabochon-cut tiger's eyes. 1800 GP |
| 5 | A choker made from nine interlinked, gold-framed, ivory squares, each depicting a deity from a well-known pantheon in a traditional pose. 1200 GP | 15 | A four-inch wide gold brooch depicting a chaotic, nine-pointed starburst. A polished oval of black coral is set in the center of the piece. 1200 GP |
| 6 | A three-inch wide gold brooch depicting a frowning man with curly hair and fat lips. The piece is worth 500 GP, but an evil ghost haunts whoever possesses it. | 16 | A matched set of diamond jewelry in gold settings : a ring, a pendant necklace, and a pair of earrings. Sold individually the pieces are worth 6000 GP, together 8000 GP. |
| 7 | A ring cut from a single chunk of obsidian. It is decorated with a disturbed-looking and grinning man's face. There is a skull carved on the inside of the band, and the piece has significance to a cult or secret organization . 300 GP | 17 | A platinum diadem . The band resembles a pair of ropes tied in a series of square knots. Two rearing horses face each other atop the crown. This piece is a famous commission, stolen before delivery. 3500 GP |
| 8 | A clerical stole of blue silk decorated with silver thread and amber beads. Each bead contains a preserved insect. 900 GP | 18 | A simple gold ring set with a brilliant star ruby . There is a set of initials engraved inside the band. 5000 GP |
| 9 | A pair of disc-shaped gold earrings , two inches across. Each face of the two discs is decorated with the engraved and bejeweled image of a mythological creature: phoenix, chimera, hippogriff, and dragon. 2000 GP. | 19 | A belt of ornate bronze links affixed to a black leather strap, sized for a very large person. The gold buckle is decorated with attractive geometric patterns and set with jet stones. 1400 GP |
| 10 | A crown of magically frozen water , caught mid-splash. This artifact has been fitted with a silver band decorated with tiny sapphires. It is suspiciously similar to a piece stolen from the merfolk . It is worth 1500 GP | 20 | An oblong brass pendant attached to a rope-like gold chain. The pendant is decorated with a series of malachite stones, and pressing three of these in the proper sequence opens a small waterproof hidden compartment . 150 GP |
