1	A tangle of thick rope, rusty chain, and broad planks is strewn across the floor, the remnants of an old suspension bridge .	11	Based on the melted hunks of wax still stuck to the frame, this twisted pile of brass and iron was once an ornate chandelier .
2	A massive trestle table with an inches-thick top is tipped on its side here. Gashes, gouges, and blood stains on the surrounding floor indicate it was used as an improvised defensive structure at some point.	12	Parts of a skeleton protrude from a pile of rubble and earth , the result of a ceiling collapse. Trying to dig out the skeleton has a one in six chance of causing another cave-in .
3	Several wooden cases have been tossed into a corner, the glass bottles they contain reduced to broken shards . One bottle holds the dregs of a fine vintage that is now lost forever.	13	A rotten wooden platform supports a still-intact set of stocks , a whipping post , and a thick wooden beam strung with several sets of rusty manacles . Old bones lie scattered on the floor.
4	A pile of thick oak planks and boards fills the corner, the remains of a large table plus several chairs and benches. The bigger pieces are fractured and split but basically sound .	14	The roots of some ancient tree have broken through the ceiling and walls, forming a massive hanging curtain of decaying, fibrous wood.
5	Heaps of moldering, waterlogged books are scattered about this chamber. Most of the volumes are ruined, but there is a one in six chance of reading something useful per hour of searching.	15	A spring has worked its way through cracks in the ceiling, creating an indoor waterfall . The water fills the low spots and depressions in the floor, and slimy growths cover the fallen rubble.
6	It's hard to say if these panels of twisted iron bars were a fence, a railing, a grate, or a cage. Though rusty and bent, they're sturdy , and could serve as an improvised barrier or bridge.	16	A wool carpet , fifteen feet square, is rolled around a wooden pole. The fabric is sound , but mold and mildew have destroyed the item's value.
7	Ack! A bear! Oh wait, it's a stuffed bear . Though big and fierce-looking, a second glance reveals the creature is a rather mangy moth-eaten specimen.	17	Several dozen large, empty clay urns and pots are piled on creaky wooden shelves . Some are cracked and chipped, but the rest are sound. All of them are empty .
8	These four life-sized, humanoid stone statues have seen better days. They've been defaced, broken, and tipped over, making it impossible to tell who they may have portrayed.	18	This cart-like contraption may once have been some sort of small siege engine. The thick wooden wheels and axles are still sound , but the rest is dry-rotted and cracked.
9	A heap of bricks is piled in the center of this space. They don't seem to match the material used in this area's construction, perhaps a sign of new work being done nearby?	19	Bones , large and small, old and new, are scattered across the floor in strangely ordered piles. Whatever pattern lies behind their arrangement, it's beyond comprehension.
10	The ruined remnants of a smith's workshop are heaped here: rusted hammers and tongs , a cracked anvil and a split and rotten wooden barrel .	20	Heavy wooden racks and frames that once held weapons and armor now hold warped wooden shafts, dried-out leather, and rusty bits of metal.
