Lorne,

Happy to hear your back in one peice. Thank flyboy for me. I don't know what to think of the "lady". Use your own judgement.

Now for the kicker. A Recon team from Omaha just sent this up long wave. I am bumping the whole thing to you. Be ready for a three hour down load, ELF was never suppose to be carrying graphics.

Some explanation. It appears to be an old document from a hand held computer, first manufactured circa 2001, and in production in various forms until der tag. Appended to the first page was an encryption signit that matches and authenticates for Leonard Siikma. I don't know if you ever met Leonard, but he was a sales person with a heart. He was the one that talked me into the Project. Big blond guy, knew all about freezing because he let them popsickle him from time to time. You could really believe what he said.

So this team, fresh out of the slots, finds a blond haired mummy in their approach tunnel. In his hand is a ROM, in good condition. No ID, no sign of what killed him.

When they play the ROM, this is what they get (see attached).Roya doesn't buy it - they found it to close to the center of the disease, so to speak. I don't know what to think.
