Emergency Medicine	5	The Foreign Legion has a reputation as a home for criminals and anyone trying to escape their previous life, to this day one only has to walk into one of about thirteen recruitment centers, surrender your Passport, and you are in no questions asked. French citizens, who make up less then 20% of enlisted (and almost all officers) actually have to list a different country of origin because of restrictions of deploying French soldiers overseas. Training and discipline are hard, and tradition and esprit de corps are stressed. Initial enlistment is five years, with retirement at fifteen years. Eastern Europeans currently make up a large portion of the force.
