BRIMLING

Drifting from star to star on great space galleons reminiscent of the seafaring vessels of old are the merry scoundrels known across the galaxy as the Brimlings. Standing half the height of a human, with cherubic features and child-like faces, these motley-clad swashbucklers are some of the most unique pirates to ever ply the countless stars.

Legends say they are descended from an ancient race of hill-dwelling farmers, but Brimlings claim they have feasted among the stars for eternity. Traveling aboard their exotic Star Galleons with quixotic crews, they are quite different from other marauders who bring chaos to the universe. Their archaic ships are beautiful and lush, kept so by their ceaseless raiding on any vessel they can lay their ion grapplers upon. They are not lead by a captain, instead being led by the Ship's Cook. It is fine beer and hearty food that the Brimlings seek above hoarded gold and credits. As Brimlings say: "He who feeds me, leads me."

So fine are the tables laid out by a Brimling crew fresh from a successful raid that many captives taken often turn pirate themselves, if only for a life of endless wandering and a full belly. Dressed in floppy hats and foppish raiment, Brimlings endlessly move from star system to star system, starship to starship, always hungry for fine meals and new adventure.

Brimlings may advance to 7th level.

BRIMLING CLASS FEATURES

WEAPON/ARMOR RESTRICTIONS: Brimlings can wield clubs, daggers, firearms (pistols), grenades, laser pistols, light crossbows, mono-daggers, mono-swords, short bows, swords, and Star Swords. They can wear Light Armor (preferring Brimling Boarding Armor), and do not use shields.

FIGHT LIKE PIRATES: Brimlings use their size and swarming tactics to gain unfair advantages in combat. When a Brimling and any two (2) other allies are attacking the same target, the Brimling receives a +1 bonus on their To-Hit rolls.

LUCKY BUGGER: Once daily a Brimling may re-roll any failed Saving Throw before the results are determined by the Referee.

SMALL AND QUICK: Because of their small stature and quick reflexes Brimlings receive a -2 [+2] bonus to their Armor Class and a +1 to all To-Hit rolls made with ranged weapons.

SAVING THROW: After a night of drunken revelry and a particularly satisfying meal the next morning, Brimlings receive a +1 bonus to all Saving Throws for the rest of the following day.

SHIP'S COOK (5th): At 5th level a Brimling earns the title of Cook and attracts a crew of loyal swashbucklers, if they own a Star Galleon. As long as the crew is treated well and is able to engage in regular acts of culinary theft they always receives a +1 bonus to all Saving Throws, in addition to any other modifiers. The exact starting composition of the Ship Cook's boarding party is determined by rolling on Table 2: Brimling Board Crew below.

MODIFICATIONS	Brimling Galley, Brimling Shield Generator, Faster-Than-Light Drive, Ion Charge, Ion Grappler

Brimling Star Galleons resemble the seafaring vessels from the golden age of piracy in the legendary time before space travel occurred. Forged of metal and powered by standard engines and a Faster-Than-Light drive, they possess a unique shield generator, powered by their massive golden solar sails. Unlike standard shield generators, Brimling Shield Generators form an atmospherically sealed energy bubble around the starship, allowing the starship's crew to walk around in "open" space on deck, similar to the way that ancient sailors would. Unfortunately, if the shield generator is destroyed and the shields fail, any crew caught on deck is exposed immediately to the vacuum of space. A major benefits of these shields is that the crew can easily (and recklessly) leap from the deck of their starship and land on the hull of enemy vessels; this requires appropriate protection and the use of hull-splitting laser torches.

STARSHIP	COST (in credits)	MINIMUM CREW
Brimling Star Galleon	25,000	6 (plus 12 boarding specialists)

STARSHIP MODIFICATIONS

BRIMLING GALLEY: Unlike most ships' galleys, a Brimling Galley includes a massive kitchen capable of providing high quality meals to a large crew, provided a skilled chef like the Cook is tending the cookfires. These meals always include alcoholic beverages, and are of the finest quality.

Base Cost: 2 credits.

BRIMLING SHIELD GENERATOR: This unique shield generator can only be installed on Brimling Star Galleons due to the power requirements for it. The Brimling Shield Generator is extraordinarily powerful in both its protective capacity and the fact it creates an environmentally sealed bubble around the starship, allowing those walking on the deck of a Brimling Star Galleon to have the benefits of both gravity and atmosphere.

Base Cost: 25 credits.

ION GRAPPLER: These are ionized high-strength towing cables that can be fired into an adjacent vessel, piercing the hull and sending a pulse of energy into the target spaceship to short out its systems. Ion Grapplers can only be fired at a starship that has a Shield Strength of zero (0) and any kind of shielding automatically protects a starship from this type of attack. Ion Grapplers can only be fired at adjacent starships. If the attack is successful, the targeted starship takes 1d6 points of damage and the starship's pilot (or commanding officer, in the case of large vessels) must make a Saving Throw. If failed, the starship's engines and weapons are shut down for 5d6 rounds as they are flooded by an overwhelming energy pulse.

Base Cost: 50 credits.

EQUIPMENT

BRIMLING BOARDING ARMOR. This light, composite armor provides a small measure of protection in battle while still allowing the wearer to remain completely mobile, proving -2 [+2] Armor Class. It is environmentally sealed and has an oxygen supply of up to six (6) hours. Brimling Boarding Armor is designed for smaller species, such as Brimlings or Yabnabs, typically has many design flourishes, and is considered somewhere between fashionable and gaudy by most beings. Weight: 10 lbs. Cost: 50 credits.

BOARDING TORCH: While not a technically a weapon, a boarding torch can serve as one in an emergency situation. Instead it is used, by pirates operating in zero-gravity environments to cut through bulkheads and hulls of targeted starships. It takes 1d6+4 rounds of work with a boarding torch to cut a hole in a starship's hull large enough for a Brimling or man-sized creature to pass through. A boarding torch can be used in combat by any character able to wield a dagger and inflicts 1d6-4 points of damage. Weight: 1 lbs. Cost: 10 credits.
