SLAVIA

The Slavian Commonwealth

Capital: Gniazdo

Political system: elective monarchy

Ruler: King John VII Piastun (human)

Religion: Pontificalism, Solarism, Eddism, Reformatism

Languages: Slavian

Currency: 1 orzel = 100 groszes

Area: 218,727 mi<sup>2</sup>

Population: 22 million: 21% humans, 17% gnomes, 16% dwarves, 14% halflings, 12% orcs, 8% trolls, 6% ogres, 6% elves.

Slavia is placed between its ancient enemies: Morgovia, Wotany, the Trimonarchy, and the Monastic State, but it's not the constant wars with aggressive neighbors that influenced this ancient land the most.

Piastun, the first ruler of Slavia, was the only legendary hero who did not strike a pact with a dragon he defeated, but literally slew the beast. The Curse of the dying dragon is still looming over the kingdom. All ambitious plans are doomed to fail, victories bring no benefit, and any territorial gains are quickly lost.

Slavia of the Piastun dynasty is a backwards country of ancient woods among which you can find mansions and castles of powerful nobles, battlefields of ancient wars, and holy places of old pagan cults. The first signs of industrialization are visible only in a few developed regions. However, despite all adversities, the Slavians are proud and they never surrender, as befits the heirs of a true dragonslayer.

CHARACTERS

Key ideas for heroes from Slavia are curse and stubbornness.

Slavians balance on a thin line between fatalism and bravery. When you know that Fate itself is working against you and all your plans are doomed to fail, you can either break down... or realize that you have nothing to lose. For heroes from Slavia there are no impossible matters, especially when honor or motherland are involved. Slavians seldom change their minds, treat their world views (especially politics) very seriously, and fight at drop of the hat.

Character concepts typical for Slavia:

- a poet and bard sympathizing with anarchists, currently an expatriate.
- a hunter and traveler, trying to hunt a leshy, the spirit of the forest.
- a beautiful maiden, who's sworn to marry only a man who'll defeat her in a sword duel.

BEHIND THE SCENES

Slavia is Poland, which, despite a terrible Draconic Curse, has managed to fight off many invasions that often erased historical Poland from the map. Hardened by the Curse it proved to be too hard to swallow. Gniazdo, the capital city, is a combination of Gniezno, Cracow, and Warsaw. The Mermaid Fortress is a reference to the greatest fortifications in Europe – Warsaw Fortress and Festung Boyen, and also the spirit of Wizna and Westerplatte. Essentially, Slavia is equal parts Poland between the World Wars and the Commonwealth of Both Nations from the times of Golden Liberty. Piastun is a weak election monarch during the times of peace and invincible Sobieski during war, and every Slavian is ready to charge at dragons armed with only a lance—if he's sure he'll win, and that's at least half the time.

- a spiritualist ready to sell his soul to demons for the good of the Commonwealth.
- an ambitious industrialist trying to civilize the country despite all adversities.

ADVENTURES

Daring – armed parties attacking neighbors. Border skirmishes. A war of intelligences between Wotany and Morgovia. Sailing the Wija. Trying to rescue a kidnapped fiancée. Stopping a half-golem assassin from the Order of the Iron Maiden.

Exploration – hunting bears in the Great Oak Forest. Excavations in pagan cemeteries and stone circles. Exploring the dungeons in the unfinished forts of the Mermaid Fortress. Hunting for sunken wrecks near Ujście.

Investigation – noblemen who sold their souls to devils. Wotanian separatists in Dymnik. Ways of breaking the Dragon's Curse. Mysteries of haunted courts. Groups of highlander robbers on the borders with Nordia.

Society – local parliament sessions. Ignoramuses and overambitious glory hounds nominated as ministers. Negotiating with rebelling confederates. Bringing peace to conflicted families. Rebel against the power of the king. Lobbying

Slavian Hero in a Nutshell

Speak loudly, drink a lot, and consider everyone who is not a crowned monarch at least your equal. Don't allow others to offend your honor, be the first to fight and to defend your motherland. Never refuse a plea for help and be charming to the opposite sex.

Male names: Apolinary, Bazyli, Bogumil, Czcibor, Dobrogost, Gaweł, Gniewomir, Iwo, Jan, Jarogniew, Leszek, Lubomir, Nikodem, Roch, Sulisław, Tymon, Wilkun, Ziemowit.

Female names: Alina, Aniela, Balladyna, Bogna, Celina, Donata, Elegia, Grazyna, Halina, Jadwiga, Jagoda, Kinga, Lila, Malwina, Otylia, Roza, Wanda, Wija, Zoja.

and corruption among industrialists. Intrigues of the Monastic State going to break fealty.

SOCIETY

In Slavia guests are welcomed cheerfully, and the local saying goes "a visitor is a blessing to the house." People are honest and often drink during conversations, regardless whether they take part in homes, local councils, inns, or at

Slavia in a Nutshell

Opponents: mad nobles, devils.

Monsters: leshy, river mermaids.

Headline: “When the Archduke Berthold Nimbelung decided to spend a few days hunting in the Great Oak Forest in Slavia, he did not expect that his stay will have such a dramatic finale. The hunters have met a leshy in the woods, and the spirit summoned a herd of bisons, sending it after the Duke. The being also summoned a powerful storm and heavy rains, and so the hunt had to be stopped.”

the royal court. When it's necessary people defend their honor with a sword or pistol.

People complain about the pointless projects of Minister Buczyna, about the weakness of the king, the power of the voyevods, and about their evil neighbors, both personal and rivaling nations. They tell tall tales about heroic ancestors, relatives that had to emigrate, great victories of the past, and glorious defeats.

No one talks about the enemies of the king in the family, pacts with devils, rebellious relatives, wars between aristocrats and the servitude of peasants. No one admits that the Curse might be the only thing that's saved the land from being partitioned. And no one bad-mouths religion, the army, or the land.

PLACES OF INTEREST

Gniazdo – the capital city built around a hill, in which caves Piastun killed the dragon. The administrative center of the country, one of the few thoroughly modern cities in Slavia. Under the castle called Piasta there lies one of the most powerful nexuses in the world.

Dymnik – the industrial and technological motherlode of Slavia, won from Wotany (and the Trimonarchy) during the Great War. These areas have long been the bone of discontent among these nations, and it's not certain whether they'll stay Slavian for long.

Great Oak Forest – the largest forest in Vanadia, a popular place of hunting for Vanadian bisons (zubr) and the dwelling of a legendary leshy. It's far too easy to cross the border here, and meet unhelpful Morgovian border guards.

Mermaid Fortress – This fort is placed near Gniazdo, near the part of river Via controlled by the river mermaids. Originally it was supposed to be the largest fortification in Vanadia, but it was never finished or fully manned. Even so the forts take up the area of a small town and no aggressor has ever managed to conquer the fortifications.

Miedzianka – “Copperhead” – the tallest mountain of the Old Mountains on the southeast border of the country. Thanks to massive deposits of iron and copper the mountains were already exploited in the prehistoric times. Thanks to Prime Minister Buczyna the corridors of such old mines are now being adapted to the needs of secret magical laboratories. According to Gniazdo University, a sufficiently thick protective cover of magically active ores could protect from the Dragon Curse.

Scenery: Ancient Forest

Special: to enter the true heart of the forest you must make a survival test TN 15. Failure means a day of wandering through the forest.

Elements: thousand-year-old oaks. Ancient burial mounds. Ruins of forgotten castles, mansions and settlements. Places never seen by an intelligent creature. Holy places of pagan cults. Mysterious paths leading nowhere. Mushroom circles. Moss growing on trees. Dense undergrowth.

Antagonists: a sounder of wild boars. Giant royal bison. Wolves. Bandits. Morgovian marauders. A band of smugglers. A leshy. Demons. Pagan priests.

Hazards: getting lost in the forest, poisonous mushrooms, sudden storm, falling branches, thorns and nettles.

Scandals: picnic on an anthill. Not knowing the local history. Confusing a deer and a fallow.

Goals: hunt for wild animals. Trying to sneak over the border. Camping. Archeological trip. Finding lost friends.

SOCIETY

The background of your characters' amazing adventures is the magical version of the 19th century, with its specific atmosphere, etiquette, and the view of the world so different from our modern one.

This chapter presents the most important aspects of Vanadian culture and the ways of employing them in your game sessions.

Vanadian Etiquette

Everyday lives of people in Vanadia are determined by etiquette—stiff, commonly known, and usually observed. Fortunately for the characters, extraordinary people are forgiven more than the rest of the society and any faux pas can be simply put down to their eccentric personalities.

Ignoring etiquette carries the risk of causing a scandal and losing Reputation (Scandals 143). The more formal the situation, the more important following the protocol is. A faux pas that would go unnoticed during a party in a countryside residence could completely destroy one's life if made at an official audience with the Queen.

Below are some most diligently followed rules of everyday life in Vanadia:

- you call only your closest friends by their first name, sometimes even married couples address each other as “Sir” and “Madam”;
- you don't raise your voice in public places;
- smoking in the presence of ladies is inexcusably tactless;
- it is not seemly to express your emotions in public;
- bare skin is typical of savages; Civilized people wear hats and gloves;
- the place at a gentleman's right side is always reserved for his wife;
- discretion is essential; Much can be forgiven if it remains hidden.

This Is How Vanadians See It:

A Real Gentleman:

- is polite and, of course, gentle;
- is brave, as he has nothing to be afraid of when his conscience is clean;
- is never embarrassed, as he is always deeply aware of his good intentions;
- his honor and reputation stay untarnished, as he behaves in a civilized way;
- is never arrogant but also never shows his weaknesses;
- if he opposes something he does it without anger, if he gives in he does so graciously;
- is proud but not conceited;
- is too wise to hold little pleasures in contempt, but too noble to yield to them too often;
- respects his superiors but is not servile; is polite towards his equals and gentle to those of a lower status;
- is sociable but does not fraternize; is distinguished but without affectation;
- combines gentle manners with a strong mind;
- gives orders politely but imperiously; asks for favors with charm and confidence.

A Real Lady:

- behaves naturally, discreetly, and kindly;
- avoids publicity, respects others' feelings;
- shares the riches of her pure mind with her friends;
- does not scold anyone openly but feels pity for those worse off, the unhappy, and the ignorant;
- with her innocence and purity of heart she thwarts any evil designs, and wins love, respect, and dedication of others.

BEHIND THE SCENES

The world of Wolsung pretends to be the Victorian era, but it isn't. It is rather a mixture of the most interesting, colorful and playable elements of a really wide period starting in the 19th century and ending somewhere in the 1930s.

You don't have to reconstruct the Victorian realities and the world view of the epoch during your game sessions. Just focus on the particular elements which build the specific old-fashioned atmosphere that we usually associate with the 19th century.

Fashion

Mass production, cheap wool, and cotton from the colonies, as well as alchemical dyes and lacemaking golems have drastically changed Vanadians' way of dressing. However, what you wear still tells much about your material status (Wealth 69 and Gadgets 72).

LOWER CLASS

Farmers, workers, and wastrels wear clothes made from the cheapest materials: linen, drill, sometimes cotton. A typical man's outfit consists of working trousers, a shirt, a jacket, shoes (not always) and a cap. Women usually wear simple dresses, long skirts, and mob caps. In some circumstances you may encounter ladies whose outfits differ significantly from this description, but it is neither prudent nor appropriate to go into the topic any further.

MIDDLE CLASS

Townpeople, merchants, and officers can afford better materials, even high quality wool. Gentlemen wear vests, shirts with white collars, frock coats, and bowler hats. Ladies present all cuts of dresses, skirts, and blouses, and most wear a simple corset underneath. Little hats and pillboxes are worn on the heads and faces are often hidden behind veils. Civilized people of both sexes wear gloves. Dresses always reach down to the ground while necks are covered by high collars, neckerchiefs, or scarves.

UPPER CLASS

Wealthy men and aristocrats have access to all the benefits of the modern knitting industry: batiste, velvet, the softest wool of the highest quality—all this is made especially for them. Gentlemen parade around in tailcoats and best jackets (always appropriate for the situation), usually with a top hat, a white scarf, and gloves. Ladies choose their attire according to their needs and current moods. A loose housedress with a mandarin collar and fitted cuffs is perfectly enough in the morning, but when a lady receives guests, it's good to wear black silk and some jewelry. A feast of colors, the flap of lace, and the glitter of diamonds accompany her at a party. Sometimes even an ankle in a delicate stocking can be seen, which is usually considered almost obscene. A fan makes the outfit complete. Its moves can sometimes say more than a thousand words.

At the Seaside

It is worthwhile to say a few words about how we should dress while enjoying our vacation at the seaside. It is best to get a sports outfit of a fashionable cut. This season among the most popular beach outfits are knee-length tricots with sleeves reaching one's elbows. Models for ladies additionally have a short skirt. As usual, dark colors are more elegant, which is perfectly understandable, as light ones get embarrassingly transparent when wet. Stripes are extremely fashionable this season.

Haircuts

As illustrated periodicals have become more common, fashion is now one of the major topics discussed in social situations. The haircuts of Princesses, marshals, actresses and generals are constantly commented upon, new fashions come and go, and the way you brushed your hair or cut your mustache may influence your future social career.

Tips for a Lady: Buns have loosened, moved down and to the back of the head. Only the most conservative traditionalists and hopeless old spinsters still have a parting in the front and a tight bun on the top of the head. Modern ladies allow their frizzes on the forehead and at the sides to fall in lovely curls and plaits. In progressive Aquitaine women sometimes let their hair down at the back or arrange them in loose loops. Braver ladies can cut their hair short as they do in the east or shorten it a bit and arrange in curls decorated with flowers—just like heroines from Aeolian mythology. Ladies who look for some change but who are not willing to take such drastic steps are advised to pull their hair into a loose bun and put ribbons or other decorations in the frizzes at the sides.

Tips for a Gentleman: Haircuts are supposed to be kept impeccably tidy. Curly hair should be arranged in delicate waves, straight hair—smoothed down. Brilliantine helps to keep the haircut: without it, you just don't look like a man of dignity. Partings are more often worn on the side rather than in the middle, but we suggest observing the latest fashions. They change all too often today.

Good to Know

Brilliantine, so popular among fashionable gentlemen, almost doesn't exist for the working class. The reason for this is not the price, but a certain specific feature: during physical effort Brilliantine melts and streams down with sweat, creating greasy black trickles.

Stylish facial hair ideally complements a gentleman's haircut. Sideburns are still fashionable, but their triumphal march seems to have lost momentum lately. Wide and bristly sideburns, so long that they almost meet at the chin, are especially popular among dwarves (especially in Ostria). Beards of all kinds are also considered stylish—from Coriolean ones, thin as the blade of a dagger, to those surrounding the face, worn in the north of Vanadia. Elves usually shave their faces clean, as they do not have particularly strong facial hair. Maybe under their influence people in Alfheim and Aquitaine, if they do so at all, wear a short

BEHIND THE SCENES

To be honest, the attitude towards the role and rights of women in Wolsung is completely un-Victorian. Any attempts to stick to the realities of the period would make female characters actually unplayable.

The element that enables reconciling modern views and the atmosphere of the epoch is the dualistic church. The Church of the Goddess and the activity of priestesses made Vanadian society allow women more freedom than Victorian England did.

CAST OF CHARACTERS

This chapter will provide you with lots of antagonists who can stand in the way of your characters: beasts and monsters, dangerous animals, hordes of the undead, and opponents who are completely human, but no less dangerous. Something special for everyone.

Although beasts and monsters constitute only a part of the Wolsung Cast, we sometimes—just to make things easier—use these terms as general categories. This chapter describes the following types of antagonists: the undead, beasts, monsters and abominations, machines, Astral beings and famous (or infamous) people you can read about in crime and gossip columns.

GENERAL RULES

Antagonists are not the main characters in your stories; they only constitute challenges and obstacles for the actual heroes. That's why they are described in a simpler way than the players' characters.

Facts and Myths

The description of each opponent is accompanied by additional information the characters may obtain while studying various sources or actually observing the antagonist. An appropriate test can be made during the first encounter. This lets the characters know for sure what beast they are dealing with. Game Masters, remember some of the information provided may be myths, depending on what works best for the game.

The heroes get the first piece of information if they pass the test. They need a raise to get the second piece of information and two raises to get the third. Three raises give complete data. The knowledge can be especially useful for characters acting as a backup in a conflict.

Opponent Template

All antagonists are presented in the same schematic way.

- Default conflict: if the antagonist can start a conflict on their terms, they will choose this type of conflict.
- Type: extras (dice pool 1d10), opponent (dice pool 2d10 and more) or final opponent (three stages). Moreover, here you will find how numerous the group is, the challenge marker value, and any additional information needed.
- Abilities: the opponent's Edges, Gadgets and other skills.
- Combat: Defense, skills, and Abilities used in combat.
- Chase: Endurance, skills, and Abilities used in chases, as well as typical stakes.
- Discussion: Confidence, skills, and Abilities used in discussions, as well as typical stakes.

EXTRAS, OPPONENTS, AND FINAL OPPONENTS

There are three groups of antagonists: extras, opponents, and final opponents, depending on how big a challenge they are.

Extras

Alone, extras are no threat for the characters. They work best as support for major opponents or as an obstacle whose aim is to slow down the heroes or not to let them escape.

Rules for Extras:

- The whole group of extras gets the same initiative card and acts at the same moment.
- Extras can declare finishers only if their opponent has no challenge markers left.
- Extras cannot fumble.
- To eliminate a single extra, you don't have to declare a finisher; it's enough to score a successful hit.
- Pool the challenge markers for the whole group—one marker for each extra.
- You can eliminate more than one extra in a single attack. Before the dice are rolled, declare how many extras you want to take out. Then raise the TN by 5 for each additional extra. If you succeed you eliminate all the extras you declared. If you fail you miss all of them.
- the GM may play cards to enhance extras' rolls according to the rules of their Abilities (see Cards and Extras below).

Opponents

A single opponent constitutes a real threat for an average character. When the opponent is accompanied by a group of extras or the conflict takes place in their favorite scenery, they can cause trouble for the whole team.

Opponents have a dice pool of 2d10 or more and at least one Achievement (usually one that enhances conflicts in their favorite scenery).

Final Opponents

Final opponents are absolutely unique: unusual monsters or outstanding people. They constitute a serious threat for the whole team. Conflicts with them have special rules and are usually divided into three stages (Game Mastering 323).

TYPES OF ANTAGONISTS

Some antagonists belong to one of the groups presented below. Apart from the Abilities enumerated in the description, they also get additional skills of that type.

Animals

If not written otherwise, every animal has the following skills: survival, spot, and stealth at 6/10+.

Animals usually attack only when very hungry or provoked. In the wilderness, characters may avoid an encounter passing an opposed test survival against the animal's spot.

Constructs

Machines, golems, etc., are immune to poisons and illnesses, do not feel pain, and cannot be confused in this way. They have technics 6/10+.

Mindless

Mindless creatures are immune to empathy, expression, persuasion, and intimidation—every attempt to use these skills against them results in an automatic failure. They do not make Fear tests and cannot participate in social conflicts.

The Undead

Aimed attacks do not take away additional challenge markers. The undead are immune to poisons, illnesses, and most environmental hazards. They sense the presence of living creatures. They cause Fear TN 10.

OPPONENTS' ABILITIES

Many of the opponents have unique abilities but there are some commonalities.

The most common abilities of the antagonists are:

- area attack – the attack hits every target within its range. This usually requires spending a token or is available once per scene.
- armor – the character's Defense is increased by the armor value (+3, +5, or +10).
- assistance – the antagonist may call reinforcements (usually a group of extras) with a use an item action.
- blinding – apart from obviously affecting the narrative, blinding lowers the victim's dice pool by 1d10 to a minimum of 1d10. A blinded character can attack only at close range.
- charge – before an attack, the character may make a move, getting closer to the opponent. If the character makes an attack test with a raise, they may make another free move after the attack.
- confusion – the attack lowers the opponent's dice pool by 1d10.
- finisher – under some circumstances a finisher may be declared even after the dice are rolled.
- first strike – the antagonist may attack first before the conflict starts. The antagonist makes an opposed test and if a character loses, they are automatically hit. All raises in the opposed test count as raises in this automatic attack. If the attacking character loses, the conflict starts normally.
- flying attack – creatures which cannot fly may attack a flying opponent only as a response to the opponent's direct attack (on the same initiative card). In a chase, a flying character may spend a token to make an undeclared finisher against a non-flying creature.

CARDS AND EXTRAS

♠ spades – cooperation: "Let's cut the ropes holding the bridge. One... Two... Now!" "Fire at my command!" "I will draw their attention, and you sneak behind their backs..."

♥ hearts – zealotry: "You shall not pass!" "Boss, run! We will stop them!" "Charge!" "Die, infidels!"

♦ diamonds – reinforcement: "We need reinforcements, now!" "My whole family supports me!" "We've found another two witnesses!"

♣ clubs – sheer numbers: "You are surrounded!" "That's not true! Am I right? Am I, brothers? – Yeah, he's right!" "Let's spread out, they cannot catch us all."

- forceful blow – the attack takes away an additional challenge marker.
- frightening – the opponents have to make a Fear test at the beginning of a conflict.
- hide – the character may disappear during a conflict and attack again when the opponents do not expect it. This is a stunt based on a move action. The antagonist may also perform a first strike again before the next round.
- immobilize – the attack immobilizes the opponent. Immobilized characters cannot move or use items, the bonus from the Attribute does not count for their resistance (so resistance usually drops to 10). Immobilization may be ended by winning an opposed test.
- immune (attack type) – the character is immune to attacks of a given type and they cannot affect this character.
- impervious (attack/conflict type) – making an attack against this person requires spending a token.
- indestructible – the character does not lose challenge markers from attacks and can be defeated only by a finisher.
- isolate – this attack picks out one target from the group. The companions cannot play cards to help the target or assist the target acting as a backup. Isolation may be ended by winning an opposed test.

- knockdown – the attack knocks the opponent down. The bonus from the Attribute is not included in the lying character's resistance (so resistance usually drops to 10). Standing up requires two move actions.
- poison – the attack is poisonous. The first hit in the conflict results in losing 1 Constitution. Moreover, depending on the type of the poison, each hit has one or more additional effects: losing one die for a round, losing a card from your hand, losing an additional challenge marker, an undeclared finisher.
- pull – the attack pulls the opponent to the attacker, usually changing the range in this way. Going back to longer range requires a move action.
- push back – the attack pushes back the opponent, usually changing the range in this way. Coming back to closer range requires a move action.

- ranged attack (range) – enables attacks at long or medium range.
- ram – after two move actions and a successful attack, the character may turn over a vehicle.
- regeneration – after fulfilling given conditions, the antagonist restores challenge markers lost in the conflict.
- swipe – the attack may hit more than one target in a given range. For every raise on the attack roll an additional target is hit whose resistance is not higher than the initial target's.
- tough – attacks against this antagonist require at least three raises to take a challenge marker. Hits that are weaker, but accurate, reduce the antagonist's dice pool by 1d10 for a given round (not cumulative).
- weakness – you may declare a finisher after each attack of a given type aimed at this antagonist.

Steampunk Skirmish Game

Please do not take my remark as overly boorish, but is this your first duel, sir? I could not help but notice that you were not able to execute a single effective attack in the last hour. But please, you needn't hurry, I can devote a bit more time to you.

It is not until seven that I have my bridge appointment."

- Sir Lance Oakroot

The Wolsung steampunk skirmish game is a miniature combat game, where clubs of extraordinary ladies and gentlemen, as well as shadowy organisations and agents of obscure powers, solve their disputes by blade and gunshot rather than discussion. Each game represents a point where paths of two or more such clubs cross while they work on the same goal, but for opposite purpose. As such, the careful deduction and data gathering as well as social meetings that led them to this point are left for Wolsung roleplay narrative; a game of Wolsung skirmish game represents the point where the outcome is decided by a keen eye, reflexes and a bit of luck.
